CENTRE FOR THE STUDY OF FINANCIAL INNOVATION

GENERALI

A dinner discussion with Maurice (Hank) Greenberg.
To be held on Thursday, February 12, 2009, at Wax Chandlers Hall,
6 Gresham Street, London, EC2V 7AD
at 7pm for 7.30pm.

Generali/CSFI Fellowship programme in insurance

As you may know, the Generali Group is the sponsor of an insurance programme at the Centre for the Study of Financial Innovation, in London. As part of this programme, we are organizing a small number of high-level dinners, at which key figures from the global insurance industry will get a chance to speak informally about prospects for insurance and about the opportunities and problems that lie ahead.

The first such dinner has as its keynote speaker Hank Greenberg – whom you will all know from his 35 years building up and running AIG.

There is no one in the insurance industry like Hank Greenberg, and we are delighted that he has agreed to speak (under the Chatham House rule). We are also delighted that Giovanni Perrissinotto, chief executive of Generali Group in Trieste, has agreed to co-host the dinner, and to join in what I am sure will be an extraordinarily lively discussion. At Mr. Perrissinotto/Mr. Greenberg's special request, I would like to extend an invitation to you to join us. We will be a quite small group, and an early reply would be appreciated – either by contacting the Centre on 020 7493 0173 or by emailing nicole@csfi.org.uk.

We very much hope to see you at Wax Chandlers' Hall, on February 12.

Sincerely yours,

Andrew Hilton
